

PY 322 : Physiological Psychology

Biological basis of behavior including: the anatomy and physiology of brains and neurons, motor systems, sensation and perception across multiple sensory systems, hormone systems and sexual behavior, sleep and other regulatory behaviors (hunger/thirst), cognitive functions (learning, memory, attention, executive function), and the biological basis of psychological disorders (including drug based therapies).

Credits 4

Fees

$20 course fee.

Prerequisites

PY100 and BI104.

Semester Offered

Spring even years